DEVOTED TO THE INTERESTS OF WASHINGTON COUNTY

VOLUME III.

SPRINGFIELD, KY., WEDNESDAY, MARCH 13, 1907.

NUMBER 15

TERBACKER! JIST TERBACKER!

I Says I and You Orter
Heerd 'Em Yell.

Twenty-five Hundred Acres of the Weed Pooled In Washington
County.

"Well! Well! Well!"
Said a man when he fell
Head foremost down into a very deep
well,
"I'm in it to-day!"
And that, as a rule
When you mention the pool
Is what they say.

Don't consider an increase in acreage, but rather the reverse.

"Money is talking" in every county
in the Burley District, and "warehouse" is the subject.

The organization grows stronger as the days go by; the "impossible"
which some people contended could be
"surmounted," is now very possible
—dead easy.

If you want to abuse something abuse the devil. It's our candid opinion that he ought to be abused. DON'T ABUSE YOUR NEIGHBOR. He has a right to his opinion.

Farmer Jones would plow a row,
Then he'd breathe a prayer or so,
Then he'd whistle, then he'd sing,
Then he'd cut the pigeon-wing.
And I hold that that's the way—
Plow a row and stop and pray;
Prayin' makes the plowin' slow,
But, lawdy how the crops will grow.

Farmer Jones' head was level
Praised his neighbor, fought the devil;
Threw no mud and slung no stones—
Call him:

Billy Burley Booster Jones.

The farmer wants to crush no man.
The A. S. of E. was organized for no such purpose. The object of this organization is to prevent the other fellow from crushing the farmer.

Quit your laggin', quit your laggin',
Get into the old "band wagon."

If you stay out of the pool, it may mean that you will be left out in the cold.

The man who DOES
Makes the old world hum and buzz.

Over 2,500 acres of the 1907 crop
pooled in Washington county.

If you don't go to "DOING" you may get "DONE."

When the warehouse is completed it will be the biggest thing in Washington county.

The man in the pool will be "in the swim."
There's lots of fun in store for him—
Splash! Splash! Splash!
And a bucket o' lasses—up to the brim.

Hon. W. C. McChord will speak in Lebanon next Saturday, "Tobacco"
the subject.

Organizer Will Nally is in Marion county this week putting in links for the A. S. of E.

You can lose nothing by going into the pool, but there is a chance for loss in going out. The rapid rate tobacco pooled all over the burley district make it very evident that there will be few independent crops left for the trust. But admitting for the sake of argument that this pooling arrangement will fail in its purpose, can you point out where you will lose by pooling your crop? Your tobacco will not simply be released, and you will be at liberty to dispose of it to whomsoever

you desire.

SUCCESSFUL CONTESTANTS

Much Interest Manifested in Preliminary Contest.

One of the most exciting contests
that have been held at our school occurred last Friday when the Preliminary tournament was held in Prof.
Colvin's room.

There were four contestants, Senior Boys, Senior Girls, Junior Boys and Junior Girls. The contests in every category were very close, the judges having an unusually hard time to decide, especially in the senior boys' contest.

The boys who contested for the Senior representation were Harry Shultz,
Lyman Barber, Ray McClain, Leo
Simms and Will Waters. The winners of the contest were Will Waters, first,
Lyman Barber, second.

The Junior boys who spoke were Charles Haydon, A. R. Shultz and Ivor
Roberts. A. R. Shultz won first place and Charles Haydon second.

The largest number of entries was in the Junior girls' class, and the greatest variety of speakers. A feature of the contest was a recitation by Lorena Nally, a little girl of the second grade, which captivated the crowd.
The first place was given to May Mayes and the second to Lorena Nally. The other speakers were Edith McClain,
Ruth Claybrooke, Katherine Gore,
Hattie Arnold, Mary Noe.

The last one of the contests was that of the Senior girls. Those who spoke were Misses Isa Colvin, Hattie Rice, Alice Haydon and Mabel Williams.
Miss Isa Colvin received first place and Hattie Rice second.

The judges were Messrs. W. D.
Claybrooke, Charles M. McChord and Hood Cunningham.

From the fall of Rome is dated all modern history; from the fall of Hume
will be dated all future school history.
Imagine not, readers, that the dignified and learned pedagogue who daily holds the students of the seventh grade under the awe of his stern countenance,
has fallen from the paths of righteousness,
or that he has fallen into the meshes
of feminine charms of his students or of others, for such is not the case.
The exact facts seem to be as follows: The professor was sitting at his desk and around him were all his students, giving the pride and satisfaction of feeling that they were his. All of a sudden a crash was heard and it was seen that the professor had gradually slipped down in his chair till it fell backward and he was prostrated to the platform under his desk. The timely assistance of several of his students reestablished him to his wonted place which he has kept undisturbed since. When interviewed about the matter, Prof. Hume said, "The fact as you have recorded it is true as to the main and I have only to say that 'Pride
goeth before a fall.'"

Mr. Towler to Leave.

Mr. H. S. Towler, the popular and efficient assistant manager of the telephone exchange in Washington county,
has accepted a position with the Home Telephone Company at Paris, Ky., and will leave the last of the month to begin his duties there. Mr. Towler is an excellent, painstaking telephone man, and the people of Springfield are very sorry that he and his family are going to leave. In his departure the patrons of the telephone company here lose one of the best servants the company has ever had here. Mr. Towler has done much toward giving Washington county a perfect system.

Mr. Bryan Says The Weekly Is People's Paper

Bryan's Commoner: Democrats often complain of lack of representation
among the dailies of the large cities,
and they frequently make an effort to raise money by subscription to assist in starting a daily. It is becoming more and more evident that much better results can be obtained from the starting of state weeklies.

A daily in a large city is a business venture until it succeeds, and it becomes a great business enterprise if it does succeed. It requires a large plant and necessitates a large daily paper. As a rule, a daily paper does not succeed until some one person has secured enough stock to make it worth his while to devote his entire energy to the paper, and a man who makes a business success of a large newspaper
must give his whole time and attention to it. As soon as a daily is on a paying basis it tends to become of less and less value as a party organ and as a vehicle for the spread of party doctrines. As a rule, it is edited in the counting-room rather than in the editorial department, and in most cases the owner of the paper is not the editor. A man who has the business ability to build up a great newspaper plant generally has not the training necessary for the writing of editorials. We find, therefore, that our great dailies
are becoming more and more impersonal; they have no individuality behind them—no conscience which speaks through them. The editorial writers come and go and while they stay their editorials are shaped to meet the wishes of the man or group of men in control. Some of the large dailies are owned by corporate interests that are so connected with exploiting enterprises as to be worse than useless as exponents of public opinion. It is not unusual for all of the newspapers of a city to rally about some franchise holding company when it seeks further privileges, and yet corporation candidate may be defeated in an election by one who has no newspaper connections.

So much for the daily. Because of the waning influence of its editorial page it is likely to become more and more a mere newspaper, appealing for patronage to the members of all parties relying upon its advertising for its profits.
If the democrats of a state need an organ, let them establish a weekly at the capital of the state or at some other distributing center. If there is already established a newspaper which is ably edited and which devotes its attention to state and national politics,

it may be easier to convert this paper
into a state organ than to establish a new one. Let the paper be known as the state organ of the party and let the state committee use it for the spread of such information as needs to be presented to the voters. Money put into a weekly will enable the party leaders to reach a great many more voters than could be reached by the same amount invested in a daily, and the weekly is read more carefully than the daily.

The editor of a weekly is known; his character stands back of his writings and is a pledge for the truth of what he says. The weekly is likely to grow in political influence for it is the only paper that can be owned and edited by the same man. The editor is close to the people and not only knows their needs, but cannot afford to betray his readers into the hands of predatory wealth. His advertisers, too, are not of the kind that attempt to control the policy of the paper.

We ought to have a democratic weekly
of state circulation in every state.
The state weekly will not only not interfere with the local weeklies but it ought to work in harmony with them.
Newspaper literature is the cheapest that there is, and as nearly every voter takes several papers there is no reason why he should not take a weekly giving the news of the community and discussing local issues, and in addition subscribe for a state weekly which will defend his interests in all matters of state importance. The Commoner cannot cover the ground of the state weekly because it is a national rather than a state paper and its columns are devoted to the discussion of questions of national importance. It will cooperate with the state weeklies and the local weeklies, for each has a sphere
of its own and all can work together for the promulgation of democratic principles, for the advancement of democratic policies and for the preservation of a government "of the people,
by the people and for the people."

Hotel Organization.

Mr. Woodson Moss, proprietor of the While W. S. Ross was attending the his eleven-year-old daughter got too

her and tore her clothes off just in time to save her life. All of her hair was burned off her head and she was otherwise badly burned. She is doing very well at this writing.

Your correspondent received a letter
from J. W. Perkins, of Lovington, Ill., saying that he and his family would will gladly receive him back into our community, and trust he will stay with us this time.

Killed His Uncle.

Anderson News: John Best, thirty-five, struck his uncle, A. Best, last week over the head with a rock hammer
and he never regained consciousness, dying on Sunday night. Alfred Best was sixty years of age and the two men had a dispute over the selection of a preacher for the Pleasant Grove church in the western part of the county. A few words brought on the difficulty and the younger man picked up the hammer brought the older one the fatal blow.
He immediately left the neighborhood and has not been located since, though his father telephoned the officials that he would come in and give himself up.
They were both prominent farmers in that part of the county and had always been peaceable and law abiding citizens. The unfortunate affair has been a great shock to this community.

THANKS!

I Desire to thank the farmers and their wives for the very prompt responses they made to my ad. last week.

CONGRESSMAN A. O. STANLEY

As Seen By Savoyard...He Once Taught School
at Mackville.

(Washington City Post.)

As a rule funeral oratory in Congress is supine on the dead level of the commonplace, the conventional and the perfunctory, but like most things, it has its exceptions, and there are in the vast mass of words and words known as Congressional eulogies many fine specimens of true eloquence. Thomas P. Marshall on Richard Menafee, Richard Menafee on Henry Clay, Charles Sumner on Garrett Davis, L. Q. C. Lamar on Charles Sumner, George F. Hoar on Cushman K. Davis, Henry Cabot Lodge on Geo. F. Hoar, and John J. Ingalls on Benjamin H. Hill are only a few that are familiar to the readers of the Congressional Record. It was in the Fifty-fourth Congress that Thomas B. Reed sought to abolish the practice, and during his entire service in the House of Representatives, a continuous period of twenty years, Mr. Reed never delivered a speech on such an occasion. William R. Morrison felt the same way about it, and when, in the Forty-fourth or Forty-fifth Congress, he was supposed to be on his deathbed, he requested Proctor Knott and John Randolph Tucker to have the hammer promptly fall on Springfield after he had spoken twenty minutes, and to prevail on Dick Townsend not to speak at all, if possible; but Morrison got well, still lives, though Springer and Townsend long ago were gathered to their fathers. Reed was balked in his efforts to abolish eulogies by the then member from Delaware, a Methodist preacher, an able, brilliant, accomplished man of the name of Willis, whose speech against the proposed rule was a masterpiece of its kind. I believe the Rev. Willis was ingulfed in the wave of Adicklam that swept over Delaware. He was the best thing in a political way that has come out of Delaware since Bayard and Gray.

I have read some of the eulogies pronounced on the late Senator Bate, of Tennessee. That of Mr. Carmichael in the Senate was notable for the opening paragraph, a perfect specimen of English and beautiful for the sentiment therein expressed. Gov. Grosvenor's speech in the House was valuable as a contribution to history and a shrewd military criticism on Hood's advance on Nashville; it was also a splendid tribute to the memory of Tennessee's dead hero.

But the best of the lot was that delivered by Owsey Stanley, of Kentucky, in the House of Representatives. This young Stanley is a many-sided man, and has had many and varied experiences. He is beautifully endowed with that rare gift, imagination. Nay, he may, without presumption, lay claim to that dangerous gift, genius, and he harkens to the admonition of the preacher, "Whatever the hand findeth to do, do it with thy might." That, and that only, is the key to success, if your hand lays hold on the right thing; and ofttime it does not. Stanley is the son of a Confederate veteran, now a minister of the gospel at Campbellsville, Ky., who came out of the war with no estate but duty well performed in the camp and duty gallantly performed in the future. The future Congressman was born in 1867, and he is one of the famous Owsey family that has contributed to make so rich the history of the old Commonwealth. He acquired a classical education under great difficulties, and his venerated taste for reading and retentive memory made him an accomplished scholar ere he was thirty. Like so many of his line, he chose the law for a profession, and as an aid to medical jurisprudence he took a course in a leading medical university of the Ohio Valley. As a trial lawyer he has no superior in all Kentucky, if success be the test of merit. He is a master of detail, and his adversary at the bar must always be ready to meet a consummate strategist and one who is master of the minutest particular of the case before the court.

George Gilbert, who represents the Eighth Kentucky, and Owsey Stanley, of the second Kentucky, have stored in their capacious memories as many of the curious of historic fact and literary fancy as any other two men in Congress, and there is not a man in either branch of the National Legislature who cannot learn something to his advantage from either of these men. Stanley, if he held the acquisition of money as the sole end or the chief end of life, would soon be a millionaire. He is a jack of many trades, and stranger than all, he is good at all.

Stanley's eulogy of Bate is a finished production and a tribute to the Saxon race. Bate was of the cream of the South, and the South is of the cream of the Saxon people. He went back and quoted from Tacitus, who saw in the Saxon of 2,000 years ago what everyone beholds in the Saxon of twenty centuries later. He quoted the magnificent passage from Taine in eulogy of the Saxon wife, and traced her down from German forest to Southern plantation through all the ages extending from Julius Caesar to Robert E. Lee. Since the death of Henry VIII, two and a half centuries ago, there has been no struggle between prerogative and liberty, between the nobles and the commons, that privilege was not defeated, and never a victory of the lot that was not the work of the Saxon in the Englishman.

The passage in the speech that is most admired is the following tribute to the dead Senator. It is an elegant sample of eloquence and rhetoric: "As illustrative of this fine idea of duty, which ran in sunlight and shadow through all the life of William Bate, and as illustrative of its hold upon the race, I would recount a touching incident told of the battle of Cressy. It is said that when the gay and festive chivalry of France had dashed themselves to pieces against the fixed and immovable English columns, when the mailed hand of Edward III had crushed into the mire and blood of the vanquished field the fleur de lis of France, that the blind King of Bohemia, unwilling to hear the death groans of his friends, unwilling to listen to the wail of disaster and defeat, unwilling to survive his companions, had his horse bound fast and tight to a charger upon either side, and between his trusty courtiers, guided by the turmoil and thunder of the fight, dashed to death. When night came and the pale moon looked down upon 30,000 slain, they found three horses standing like silent sentinels and three dead riders at their feet, and between his companions, with the seal of death upon his blind eyes, lay the brave old King of Bohemia.

"A white tri-plumed crest dappled in blood still clung to his dauntless brow; and on it was inscribed the simple motto, 'Ich dien'—I serve. It thrilled five centuries past and rang through a thousand years of civilization yet to come. The most martial of England's kings reverently lifted the simple crest and placed it as a deathless laurel, up on the brow of his first-born son; and to-day, more precious than all the trophies wrung from Poitiers, Agincourt, or Waterloo, high above all the bloody swords and battered shields and tattered banners taken in a thousand years of conquest, that has girded the earth and mastered the sea, old England still holds aloft that tri-plumed crest as the proud insignia of all her princes yet unborn and all her unworried kings."

"I could write upon the tomb of William B. Bate, with truth and with sincerity, the motto of the Prince of Wales and the dead Bohemian king—serve. One single instance in his life portrays in rare and radiant colors his flawless devotion to duty. Wounded at Shiloh, his horse shot under him at Chickamauga, wounded again before Atlanta, ragged, emaciated, racked with pain, with pallid face and thin lips set, you see that heroic figure on his crutches amid his companions in arms. It was at this time that there came to him the tempting offer of civic honors, of ease and wealth and fame. Unsolicited, a grateful and trusting people laid at his feet the chief magistracy of a sovereign State. The old soldier was immovable. Setting his face like a flint toward the foe, whom he knew was destined to ultimate victory, he took in his manly arms his wretched companions and sent back to those who would tempt him with office or power that message which shall thrill all Tennesseeans in the centuries yet to come:

"I shall accept no civic honor so long as an enemy of Tennessee desecrates her soil."

There is much of the sentimental in that passage, and it would not appear to a man like Thaddeus Stevens or Thomas B. Reed, or William R. Morrison. The charge of the Light Brigade—not Tennyson's charge, but Cardigan's; the battle, not the poem—was only a military sentimentalism, but it has been an invaluable military asset of the British empire for half a century. What a dull old world this would be if there was no sentiment. There would be no honor in man nor chastity in woman. The glory of Trafalgar was incalculably augmented by Nelson's thrilling signal. Though he fell at the head of his file on a gory field more than 100 years ago, the first name on the roll of an immortal regiment of the French line is La Tour d'Auvergne, "Le premier grenadier de France," and it is an inspiration to every private in the French army. It is sentiment, pure sentiment, but it is worth more to that wonderful people than any victory of Conde, or Terrence, or Saxe. There is not an Englishman who would not sooner see the Dreadnought founder than to wake up some morn to find that Nelson's glorious old victory was utterly destroyed. We feel the same sentiment when we think of the old Constitution, that brought more glory to American prowess than any other dozen vessels of either the old navy or the new.

He who sneers at the sentimental in man's breast is like the base Indian who threw away a pearl richer than all his tribe. It was sentiment that moved the rich Hamden to deny his King a few shillings of ship money. It was a sentiment that stirred the breast of Patrick Henry when he conjured the storm that brought on its wings the American revolution. Without sentiment this world would be peopled with Gradgrinds, that would substitute the multiplication table for "Hamlet" and tared and tret for "Paradise Lost."

But there is as much prose as poetry in Owsey Stanley. He is as practical as he is sentimental; as courageous as he is brilliant. Last autumn he took his political life in his hand and defied and assailed the most tyrannical, the most unscrupulous, the best entrenched political machine any State of the Union has ever known, not excepting Pennsylvania; and he not only survived, but he emerged from the strife victor. Preferment would be valueless to such a man if purchased at the price of his independence and his self-respect.

Stanley's place is at the bar, of which he could easily be a leader in any State of the Union. But he has a taste for politics, and ten years from now, I confidently predict, his name will be familiar all over this Union.

More Slavery at Home.

Generally speaking, the colonists treat the natives with kindness and consideration. Slavery and ill usage are unknown. You will see more poverty, slavery and sweating within a half mile radius of the houses of parliament in Westminster than you will find in the whole of South Africa.—South Africa.

The Pain Family

You know them; they are numerous, and make their presence felt everywhere. The names of the family are Headache, Toothache, Earache, Backache, Stomach ache, Neuralgia, etc. They are sentinels that warn you of any derangement of your system. When the brain nerves become exhausted or irritated, Headache makes you miserable; if the stomach nerves are weak, indigestion results, and you double up with pain, and if the more prominent nerves are affected, Neuralgia simply makes life unendurable. The way to stop pain is to soothe and strengthen the nerves. Dr. Miles' Anti-Pain Pills do this. The whole Pain family yield to their influence. Harmless if taken as directed.

"I find Dr. Miles' Anti-Pain Pills an excellent remedy for overcoming headache, neuralgia and distressing pains of all sorts. I have used them for the past seven years in this capacity with the best results."
—MRS. JOE MURPHY, Peru, Ind.
Dr. Miles' Anti-Pain Pills are sold by your druggist, who will guarantee that the first five cents' worth, if it fails, he will return your money. If it cures you, never sold to him. Miles Medical Co., Elkhart, Ind.

The Louisville Times prints the following from the Frankfort Roundabout.

"Isn't it funny? The farmer complained of the monopoly of the tobacco trust, and then organized a tobacco trust, with ironclad provisions themselves! Some are already complaining that this new trust is not keeping faith. Why did they not decline to plant tobacco at all? That would have diminished the supply and broke the trust monopoly."

Nothing funny about the farmers' tobacco "trust" at all. It's a "shot" in self-defense. "Why did they not decline to plant tobacco at all?" That's a very brilliant question, indeed. There would be just about as much reason in a suggestion that the Roundabout, the Times, and other newspapers discontinue publication for a season in order to destroy the paper trust.

A farmer out in Illinois went to Chicago and married a woman who had advertised for a husband. She asked him for $3,000 with which to buy a hat. He gave her the money and she gave him the slip. The police are after her.

The startling news comes from Jackson, Ky., that some unknown miscreant promiscuously wasted several big guns of powder and ball upon the streets there last Saturday night, "teaching" nothing but Jim Harris' store.

Quits Race.

Lexington, Ky., March 12.—It is probable that Joseph Botts, of this city, who recently announced himself as a candidate for the Democratic nomination for Railroad Commissioner in this district, will not make the race. This was the last day on which the candidates could put up their entrance fee, and when Mr. Botts was asked if he had paid the fee he declined to answer, but said he would make a statement about the matter to-morrow. Asked if he would not be barred from the race if he did not formally enter to-day, he replied: "Not necessarily," but would make no explanation.

Know more about it than any other man; be more skillful in it than any of your competitors. Save money. Get a good reputation for honesty, trustfulness, regularity and trustworthiness. Following the conference of representation of Louisville commercial organizations with Mayor Barth and a subsequent conference with President McNary, of the Street Railway Company, yesterday afternoon it became known that the business interests of the city would strive to bring about a settlement of the differences between the railway company and its striking employees through the agency of an intermediary committee.

"D--n Them."

Asheville, N. C., February 27.—W. C. Gray, of Edgerton, Mass., who came here some time ago and took a home for the season, has been shut up in his house for two weeks with his wife's body and refuses to leave it. He has had the body embalmed and spends almost the entire time at the side of the corpse. He says he is not going to be separated from her even by death. All efforts by his neighbors to comfort him have been repulsed. He refuses admittance to all visitors. Crape was put on the house by him the day his wife died, and he will not allow it to be removed. He became almost distracted by grief. His young son, who is with him, has interested in behalf of the neighbors who call, but he replies:

"D--n them; they did not come to see her when she was sick, and they can't come now."

He is hysterical at times and sits for hours by his wife's corpse weeping. He wished to take the body into his sleeping room, but through the persuasion of his son it was allowed to remain in the front part of the house, where the curtains were closely drawn. He says he will take the body back to their home in Massachusetts when the winter season has passed in the North, and that he will not allow it to be buried until the frost is out of the ground.

Mrs. Gray died of pulmonary congestion Thursday night, February 11. The house was at once closed and an undertaker summoned, who was instructed to clothe the body in fine raiment and place it in the most expensive casket that could be obtained. After this was done no one but a son and daughter were allowed admittance. During the daytime Gray only leaves the body to take slight nourishment, and most of the nights he spends in lonely vigil by the casket.

Health in the Canal Zone.

The high wages paid make it a mighty temptation to our young artisans to join the force of skilled workmen needed to construct the Panama Canal. Many are restrained however by the fear of fevers and malaria. It is the knowing ones—those who have used Electric Bitters, who go there without this fear, well knowing they are safe from malarious influences with Electric Bitters on hand. Cures blood poison too, biliousness, weakness and stomach, liver and kidney troubles. Counted by Haydon & Robertson, druggists. 50c.

Delmas' Stenographer Calls on Prisoner, and Consults With Him—Thaw Attends Services.

New York, March 11.—Delphin M. Delmas, senior counsel for Harry K. Thaw, communicated with his client, through his confidential stenographer, who was admitted to the Tombs early in the day.

The young woman said that she had come from Mr. Delmas, who was spending the day at Atlantic City, and, after being identified by Warden Flynn, was escorted to the second tier, where she talked for some time with Thaw outside the gate.

Upon receiving the girl the prisoner spent some time in writing, after which he summoned a clerk, to whom he gave $5 to pay the expense of some long-distance telephoning.

This disposed of Thaw turned his attention to a letter from his mother which had been brought to the Tombs by Josiah Thaw's chauffeur.

For 45 minutes Thaw was engaged in answering his mother's letter, and, some time later, devoted nearly an hour in replying to a letter which, in the meantime, had arrived from his wife.

In the afternoon Mr. O'Reilly, of Thaw's counsel, called. Upon leaving the attorney said that he had found the prisoner in "pretty good spirits."

Thaw attended the chapel service. He had nothing to say to newspaper men beyond the message that he had been warned by counsel that he should have nothing further to say and that his attorneys would have to do the talking.

District Attorney Jerome remained at his home and was again in conference with the alienists for the state.

It is understood that a hypothetical question was formed. Assistant Attorney General Zerk, one of the criminal courts building during the afternoon and assisted in the work of the stenographers, who made copies of questions which later were submitted to Mr. Jerome.

Subpoena servers were kept busy throughout the day and made frequent trips to the principal courts building and to Mr. Jerome's home.

When asked as to the preparation being made by Jerome for the rebuttal, which will open Monday, Mr. Garvin said that nothing could be made public.

STRIKE IS ON.

Street Car Employees Quit Work—Electricians May Join.

Louisville, March 11.—Street car passenger traffic was suspended here. The employees of the Louisville Railway Co. walked out at 5 o'clock Sunday morning and the strike is on.

A mass meeting of the Federation of Labor was held Sunday at Germania hall. Ben Commons, sixth vice president of the International Association of Street Car Employees, and Henry Ott, of Cincinnati, president of the Ohio State Federation of Labor, spoke.

John Young, president of the Louisville Federation, issued the call and presided at the meeting. The federation voted moral and financial support to the strikers, and advised them to "stand pat," but to attempt no violence. One big department store will advertise the establishment by it of a private auto line to bring customers to its store.

The electricians at the power plant did not walk out, as had been expected by union sympathizers, but it is said no work is put to their union the first of this week.

TWO VESSELS GO DOWN.

German Cargo Steamer and Trawler Founder in North Sea.

Berlin, March 11.—A dispatch from Cuxhaven reports the loss of 33 lives by the foundering of two vessels—a German cargo steamer, the George Westerman, and a trawler, during heavy gale in the North Sea. The dispatch says no further details have been received, but that it is believed those drowned comprised all aboard both vessels.

Hugh Wave Hits Steamer.

New York, March 11.—The French liner steamer La Savoie, from Havre, March 2, carrying more than 1,000 passengers, arrived here after perhaps the most severe experience of the transatlantic line that have recently reported rough weather. The steamer ran into a series of gales, which increased in violence until Thursday, when a monster wave swept the main deck and forced Capt. Tourner to bring his trembling craft to shore. She drifted eight hours before the voyage could be safely resumed.

Theater in Ruins.

Knoxville, Tenn., March 11.—The Lafayette theater and several adjoining buildings were destroyed by a fire believed to be of incendiary origin.

Father and Children Dead.

Dubuque, March 11.—Michael Bower, a well-to-do farmer, and his ten-year-old daughter Isabel were instantly killed on a crossing of the Erie railroad at Lancaster. Bowers' 16-year-old son Rosa is dying from her injuries.

Woman Bullfighters Injured.

El Paso, Tex., March 11.—All five of the woman bullfighters whose farewell tour was in the city was the attraction at the Juarez Plaza del Toros were injured by being gored or tossed by the bulls.

THE MAJOR'S TOAST.

It Turns Out to Be a Roast, Thanks to Mrs. Spiker.

Major Spiker, a little man, very fat, very genial and with a head as devoid of hair as a porcelain doorknob, sits with Mrs. Algrita Spiker, who is a little more than a person, could kick a tin bathtub down the back steps all night, and Mrs. Spiker would smile like a brass band in blissful ignorance of the noise, which proves that she is rather deaf.

There are two things in the world of which Mrs. Spiker is very fond—her party and her husband. She never fails to accept an invitation to one or to carry the other with her.

Not long ago they attended a birthday party, and the major was down to propose the health of "The babies." Being very fond of children, it was thought that this toast would just suit the major.

Unfortunately for Major Spiker and the assembled guests, he changed his toast to "The ladies" without warning his wife of the fact, who, of course, thought her husband would confine himself to the toast of the little ones.

"Good, Major Spiker," said Mrs. Barker, the hostess, as the dinner advanced, "it is your turn to give your toast, and pray say something complimentary to our guests."

"When my charming hostess," said the major, rising, "requests me to do a thing it is my duty to obey. Therefore I take pleasure in drinking the health of the ladies. The ladies cherish us in prosperity, soothe us in adversity and by their tender ministrations light on the burden of life. I drink to the ladies."

When the applause subsided Mrs. Spiker, ignorant of the true subject of the toast, but glowing with pride and admiration, said:

"Oh, Mrs. Barker, you don't know how fond the major is of me. I have seen him more or three on his lap at once, and—"

"Algrita!" gasped the major. "Just teasing the life out of the poor, dear, dear! He is such a favorite with them, and every chance he gets he is sure to have them in his arms or romping with them. He's got the loveliest nature of any man I ever saw, and somehow they come to him when they won't to any one else."

Major Spiker fell back in his chair with a groan—Fit-Bits.

A False Alarm.

Village Dame—Ah, I do think as genteel folk don't know what trouble be. There's my darter now, just lost the last one o' seven dollars, and I'm feedin' 'em on the best. But 'twere no use. They've died one after t' other.

Spiker—Dear, dear! I'd no idee your daughter had had so many children. Dame—Children! I be takin' 'o' pigs!—Funch.

What We Eat.

A food inspector in Manchester, N. H., found a piece of beef and pork in a butcher's stall that was rather questionable. He called in the owner of the place.

"Look here," he said, "what is your opinion of this meat?"

The butcher looked it over. "I had forgotten all about that," he said. "It's a pretty old stock."

"Well, what is your opinion of it?" "My opinion," said the butcher slowly, "is that it is unfit for human food, but it might do for sausage."—Woman's Home Companion.

Lost, between 9:30 p. m., yesterday and noon to-day, a bilious attack, with nausea and sick headache. This loss was occasioned by finding at Hayden & Robertson's drug store a box of Dr. King's New Life Pills, the guaranteed cure for biliousness, malaria and jaundice. 25c.

I WANT:

I am constantly in the market for butcher cattle. Let me make you an offer when you have any for sale. I also want to buy Sows and Pigs, and occasionally some good Butcher Sheep.

Veal Calves Wanted at all Times

Notify me by letter or telephone and if possible I will come and look at the stock.

GILBERT CARPENTER.

I also want to buy a lot of second-class horses. They must be fat, and in good condition.

"Red Bird"

Here we are now boys with "Red Bird." "The Peacock of the Flock"

The one we have been needing for a long time. I have been working to get this horse, and now it is up to you to get it for my interest as well as yours. "If both of us work, we all work together."

Red Bird is the finest breeder in the State. The reason I can say this is because he has proven himself to be the best. His colts have sold for higher prices than any colts I can mention. This horse is a standard bred saddle horse and is registered. This goes to prove that he is a very fine horse, also a splendid breeder.

Look at his last years colts, they will prove what he is. They have style, firm action and have the speed.

Now gentlemen if you want a saddle horse you want one that can "step some," if you want a harness horse you want one that can "go."

Thanking you all for last years patronage and hoping to have it increased by the year 1907.

"Sun Shine"

I know you are not going to see saddle horses all-together so remember the famous harness horse SUN SHINE. Sun Shine defeated King Brook the famous horse that won 165 blue ribbons out of 185 entries in the ring. He also defeated Rex Arbuckle, who won the blue ribbon at the Lexington State Fair.

"Bill Goebel"

Don't forget the great male Jack Bill Goebel. No better breeder in the county.

Look for my bills and other advertising in a short time.

Don't forget that I am still at the Fair Ground Stables, Springfield, Ky.
